

Jobs boost in Wolverhampton

Berry Recruitment has been chosen to supply more than half the workers at the new Gestamp factory in Four Ashes, Wolverhampton.

The site is opening following a £70m investment by the Spanish car parts giant that has seen the creation of hundreds of jobs.

Berry Recruitment is supplying nearly 100 workers daily, including production staff, forklift drivers and welders.

The family-owned national recruiter will be based on-site and it is the fourth Gestamp plant that it works at.

Gestamp produces parts for a variety of car makers including BMW, Jaguar Land Rover, and Toyota.

Matthew Breakwell, onsite sales director, said: "This is a show of confidence in our ability to supply the workers in this sector, and it complements our supply to Gestamp's Cannock site in particular.

"Being onsite means the client has great trust in us to deliver, something we already do daily at our other operations with them.

"It is also great news for the region with so much investment having been made by Gestamp and the creation of new jobs.

"The region has the talent and skills necessary for a company of this size to put down roots. It is our job to harness those skills and talent for our client.

"We have plenty of positions available so we'd love to hear from anyone looking for work."

Mark Pearson, Gestamp HR manager, said: "We are looking forward to attracting the most qualified talent to our plant to produce lighter and safer auto parts for our clients, the global car manufacturers.

"We are building a collaborative relationship with Berry, to drive the passion and performance of our jointly valued workforce."
